SCOPE

Edition ledger

The complete pilot corpus at the stated cutoff. Exact versions remain the citable unit; nested sections are never promoted into independent works.

Accelerating Scientific Research with Gemini: Case Studies and Common Techniques

David P. Woodruff, Vincent Cohen-Addad, Lalit Jain, and 33 others

A selected collection reporting human–AI collaboration across theoretical computer science, economics, optimization, and physics.

Material limit. The cases are selected; the full denominator of projects, prompts, branches, and abandoned investigations is unavailable.

Version	arXiv:2602.03837 · v3
Identity	36 authors · 154 pages
Subject	Human–AI research
Standing	Pilot reconstruction · Claim-specific
Relations	17 sections · 3 versions · 1 traced claim
Latest change	Color-description cleanup, a cosmic-string follow-up citation, and minor wording edits.

Reading the index

Identity.	Every entry names one exact source version and keeps earlier releases immutable.
Standing.	Deposit, review, validation, currentness, rights, and completeness remain separate assertions.
Provenance.	Source-authored statements, platform interpretation, and external evaluation are labeled separately.
Limits.	The strongest known material limitation travels with the work rather than being buried in ancillary notes.
